
of his large stock of goods. On Sunday M. E. Lawrence removed to his new building, which is one of the finest structures in this part of the state. The plate-glass front gives the building a decidedly metropolitan air, while the interior arrangements are very handsome. It will be two or three weeks before the second story is ready for the reception of his family, who will have most convenient and pleasant quarters. The postoffice, which is situated in the same building, is being painted and decorated in an artistic manner. Mr. Harris having gone to considerable expense in beautifying the place and providing it with every facility for the convenient transaction of business.

As "misery loves company" it will please the farmers of this county to learn that the season is as backward elsewhere as it is with us. In southern Illinois the weather has been so cold and wet that not more than one-half of the usual crop of strawberries will be harvested. Only 80 cases were shipped from Anna, Illinois, on the 20th, while at the same time last year five or six carloads were going to Chicago daily. Coal dealers in Milwaukee say that orders for coal and wood have been more than twice as large as those for the same month in any previous year in the history of that city. Milwaukee merchants report that business has been universally affected by the unsettled weather, most of the spring goods remaining upon their shelves. Fruit trees are a month behind, the trees that usually bloom in April being now coming out in their vernal attire. From this it will be seen that Door county is doing as well as the rest of the country, and our farmers have the satisfaction of knowing that they are not in worse condition than their brethren four or five hundred miles further south.

Rev. Olympia Brown, president of the woman's suffrage association of Wisconsin, lectures at opera hall on Saturday evening May 31st and on Monday evening June 2d. Subject for Saturday evening, "The Symbol of Liberty." Lecture begins at 8 p.m. Admission free. Mrs. Brown, now married to John H. Willis but preferring not to change her name, was born in Kalamazoo, Mich. She is of New England parentage, and has the blood of Gen. Putnam, of Revolutionary prowess, in her veins. She studied at Mt. Holyoke Seminary, was graduated at Antioch College, and has since received the degree of A.M. from her alma mater. She studied theology at St. Lawrence University, and is a graduate of Canton theological school. Olympia Brown was ordained in Canton, N.Y., in 1853, and preached first in Vermont, but her first pastorate was that of Weymouth, Mass., where she labored six years very successfully. She then removed to the larger field of Bridgeport, Conn., and later still to Racine, Wis., where she still resides. She took her place in the ranks of the Returning he stopped at Eidsvolds iron works, where he summoned some of Norway's most prominent men to consider what was best to be done. Among them was Prof. George Sverdrup. On the way from Christiania to Eidsvold the farmer who drove Sverdrup asked him if he was one of those who was going to talk with the prince. Sverdrup said he was. "Then," said the farmer, "for God's sake don't consent to giving Norway to Sweden, for rather let the women and children stay at home and we go to the line. But remember, whatever you do, that God is with us."

This must have been encouraging to Sverdrup, for in conversation with the prince he said that since the king of Denmark had given up his right to Norway the prince had no more right to be king than he (Sverdrup) had, and that Norway had a right to frame its own constitution. Prince Frederick acknowledged that Sverdrup was right, and it was agreed to meet later to frame a constitution.

They met for the first time on Sunday, April 16, in the church at Eidsvold to ask the blessing of God in their undertaking. At first they were somewhat divided. Some thought it best to go over to Sweden but a majority were for Norway, and on May 17, 1814, the constitution was ready for signature. Norway was made a free and independent kingdom, and prince Christian Frederick was made king. On the next day he took the oath and signed the constitution. They all met for the last time on May 30th and after signing the proceedings they joined hands around the hall, each giving his right hand to his neighbor's left, and in this position they all cried out, "United and true until Dover falls over!" after which they parted, many being in tears.

But Sweden would not so easily submit to the treaty of Kiel, and Karl XIII attacked Norway from the sea. Many battles being fought. At last Fort Frederickstad had to be surrendered, and Frederickstad also after a bombardment lasting for three days, ending on the 26th of August. The Norsemen asked for a decisive battle, but Frederick was not the best of generals.

Sweden was at the same time anxious for peace, and prince Karl Johan in the name of the king accepted the constitution of May 17th without saying anything about the treaty of Kiel, and it was agreed to call a convention at Mods on August 14th. Peace was declared and the commander of Frederikstein opened for the first time his gates to the Swedes. King Christian Frederick surrendered his right as king and removed on the same day from Norway. The constitution was signed by Karl XIII, with the exception of a few alterations that were necessary to unite the two nations under one king, and Norway has ever since been free and independent although united with Sweden.

My friends, it is from the old lady of Mrs. E. T. LeClair of Minneapolis has been visiting with friends in this city during the past week.

Hon. John Foster of Forestville, secretary of the Frankfort land company, was in town on Friday and Saturday last, having come here to assist in issuing deeds for lands sold by his company to persons in this city.

C. A. Lundberg came down from Jeddville on Tuesday to make arrangements for the funeral of Martin Kofoed, who died suddenly at his home in Fish Creek on Monday morning. Mr. Kofoed had not been in good health for some time, but was able to attend to his business as late as Saturday, being taken seriously ill on Sunday, although he did not consider himself to be in a dangerous condition. Mrs. Kofoed was in Sister Bay, where she had for several months been in attendance upon her invalid daughter, Mrs. Axel Alfred, and there was no one at home with Mr. Kofoed excepting his daughter Mamie, aged about thirteen years. Early on Monday morning Mamie went to the residence of C. Lundberg and said that her father was sitting in a chair and she was afraid to speak to him. An investigation of the matter was made immediately, when it was found that Mr. Kofoed was dead. He was about sixty-seven years old and had resided in Fish Creek for nearly eighteen years, being for a part of that time engaged in coopering but latterly in selling meats. He was highly esteemed as a citizen and his loss will be regretted by a large circle of friends. By a singular coincidence Mr. Kofoed's death occurred upon the anniversary of that of his son Albert, who was accidentally drowned on the 29th of May, 1888, he having fallen from a bridge while engaged in fishing.
